All organisations have a legal obligation to provide occupational health and safety training.

All organisations have a legal obligation to provide health and safety training.

CGU Workers Compensation offers our customers in Western Australia, Australian Capital Territory, Northern Territory, Tasmania and Victoria:

- Free access to five online courses to all employees in your organisation
- DISCOUNTS on all our other online training courses

Isn't training expensive and difficult to organise?

Not any longer. This offer allows employers to train all their employees in five courses for free, and provides access to the learning management system.

All our courses provide easy-to-use, step-by-step training, with the information divided into small, achievable modules. They include a mix of simulations, case studies and scenarios proven to help people learn.

A 'Certificate of Completion' will verify that your employee has completed and understood the training.

- The training is available any time, anywhere
- Self paced, fun game-like activities
- Our Learning Management System reduces the paperwork
- There is no travel required

It's simple to start and requires no specialist technical knowledge. You need only a basic computer with internet access.

Organisations that provide regular training increase awareness amongst their staff and this in turn can help reduce the risk of injury, disputes or even litigation.

The following courses provide a basic start to the online learning experience for your employees in occupational health and safety:

- Alcohol and other drugs in the workplace
- Duty of care
- Manual tasks for workers
- Minimizing risk using personal protective equipment
- Work health and safety fundamentals

You also have the option to select five other courses of your choice, if the above do not suit.

This offer is available to all current CGU Workers Compensation policy holders in Western Australia, Australian Capital Territory, Northern Territory, Tasmania and Victoria and is provided by CGU Workers Compensation.
